

The Commission of the European Communities has been established by the Treaty of Rome, signed in 1957. It is the main institution of the European Union, responsible for ensuring the proper functioning of the internal market and for managing the Union's budget. The Commission is composed of representatives from the member states, who work together to develop and implement EU policies.

The Commission of the European Communities has been established by the Treaty of Rome, signed in 1957. It is the main institution of the European Union, responsible for proposing and enacting laws, managing the day-to-day business of the Union, and ensuring the application of the law. The Commission is composed of 24 members, representing the interests of the European people and the Union as a whole.